

Education for Sustainable Development in the Early Years, by John Siraj-Blatchford, Kimberly Caroline Smith and Ingrid Pramling Samuelsson (55 pages, in English).

This book has been written to support practitioners in developing their understanding of education for sustainability in the field of early childhood. The authors briefly describe the idea of education for sustainable development (ESD) and the importance of starting this education early in life. The book presents a number of examples of themes carried out in practice with young children. There are many suggested references and internet links from which more information can be found.
